Re: Founders Associate

You wrote that you want someone who has built something, run something, or fixed something nobody asked them to. I have done all three, and I want to run this with you.

I am a business graduate from Pakistan, based in Karachi. I did not wait for a title to start operating. At a family timber importer I built a business management app that opened up every ledger and surfaced about $15K in receivables the company had lost track of, and it now saves more than 20 hours a week. For a Malaysian brand I ran the whole TikTok Shop and took it from RM 50K to RM 500K in six months, directing a network of over 20,000 creators from another country. For a US company I fixed broken client operations and cut onboarding from one hour to five minutes. Each of those started as a problem nobody handed me.

That is the part of your post that made me want this: you would rather give someone a hard problem than a clear job description. So would I. I own a P&L and COGS every month at another business, which means when a number is bad, it is mine to explain and fix, not to pass on. That is the mindset you are hiring for.

I will be straight about the gap too. I have not run a venture-backed company before, and I am not an engineer by training. I build with AI tools and lean on strong engineers for the deep technical calls, which is the whole idea behind Talspace. The scope here is bigger than anything I have run. That is exactly why I want it.

I put the full case, matched line by line to your post, on one page: murtazamustafa.vercel.app/talspace-founders-associate. My CV is attached. Hand me the hard problem and I will run it.
